Ok, maybe I'm seeing things and maybe I'm not (and it partially has to do with your brand new account), but all I see is a guy tucking.

If I'm wrong, hey, I'm sorry...

Well, if it weren't true, maybe you'd display an angle which proves it. Sorry, but I see a man's stomach, and I see a 'crease', but I don't see labia.

No one is saying that its a bad thing to be a guy. The key here is the attempt to pass off an illusion as reality. That's not ok even if your "gender" happens to be that of a woman your "sex" appears to be that of a man who has tucked his genitals between his legs as to create the illusion of having a woman's labia.

You have the digital camera, which means that taking a quick shot and laying this all to rest one way or the other is up to you. That you are resistant to do that very thing lends itself to be interpreted that you are attempting to publish an illusion. This isn't helping you if you are simply "built this way as a woman" as it lends the viewer and reader to believe that you can't prove otherwise.

I have a near and dear friend who's sex is male and enjoys cross dressing and when he becomes a she.. "she" is frikking hot.. even as straight as I am I can't deny that "she" is gorgeous. If something like this is your desire here "claim it" and be proud of who you are and what you are displaying. I have seen him "tuck" like this and after asking him which sex these photo's are after looking at hips, rib cage, legs and the way you are holding your legs together in "every" shot has "tucked male" written all over it. If this isn't the case I apologize, however with the information available to me with experienced cross dressers who do tuck viewing these photo's and seeing what I and several others here are seeing it might be worth it to dispel the illusion one way or the other.

On the outside chance that you are a woman a simple photo would verify that and I have no doubt that apologies would come from all of us who have spoken up here about this..

Its up to you. I hope you find the inner strength one way or another and wish you luck in discovering what it is that you seek.

I happen to agree with everything you said... the problem being that the follow-up picture is completely different. Leg creases, skin stretching... none of which could have been present unless there was actual pulling going on. As I said in the other post, something that "proved" it, would be a shot that was similar to the first ones minus the leglock. The gyno shot doesn't appear to be the same person to me. (And while I'm horrible with names, I'm great with physical identification.)

it would also help if the same camera was used. In the mean time I've invested enough of my "viewing time" on this one and I'm moving on to the next set of lovely photo's on this journal...

I do have to say that as a photographer I did notice that this person didn't use the same camera to take the GIRL6.jpg shot. The Canon powershot 540 that you used to take the first set leaves its information about the shot in the data of the photo. This is still there on all of the original photo's. However it is "conspicuously missing" on the last one.

I'm going to drop this and let it go, however even with my apology there is still some part of all of this that aren't adding up. At this point I no longer which to drag this out....

This person is who ever they are. They want the world to believe that they are a beautiful and sexy woman who is willing to post nude images of themselves on the internet. Ok, I'm ok with that..:) even if there are some oddities about the photo's and what not...

On to the rest of this journal and many others like it to view all kinds of additional photo's where there isn't any questions, any misunderstandings, any wondering and most of all any accusations...

peace,
Indigo
